Great News for PVC

Believe it or not – what was once thought of as one of the worst plastics may become the darling of the plastics trade.

Flexible PVC products – gloves, tape, floor mats, medical, industrial tubing, bags – and rigid products – food service plates, fittings, packaging and foams – can be easily recovered & recycled!

Over 80% of PVC products disposed in EPA regulated landfills (LMOP) can be renewed by mother nature and turned into renewable biogas and RNG.

Great News for Foams

These four types of foam products are automatically renewed:

- EPS
- Poly foam
- Polyurethane foam
- PVC foam

All consumers need do: throw it in the trash.

Great News for Recycling

California's SB 343 law is good for everyone, including the plastics trade. Single-use and disposable plastics have new requirements.

Three important changes:

1. APR guidelines must be followed:

Requires a maximum of 5% calcium carbonate to be used on recyclable plastics.

2. FTC guidelines must be followed: To claim a product is recyclable, collection must be available to over 50% of the population.

3. California requirements: SB 343 requires over 60% of the population in a community has access to recycling collection, and;

4. The cross-out logo (below) must be used on non-recyclable products.

Use the RNG Plastic technology and mother nature safely converts PVC and foam products into renewable biogas, LCFS fuels, even plastic.

We are ready to help.
